1. Harriet Tubman and her family were slaves on a large plantation. Describe what you think their life was like.

2. Harriet was able to escape by herself, but how do you think she felt about the family and friends she had left behind? If you had been her, what would you have tried to do about it?

3. The Underground Railroad was not really a railroad, but a lot of caring people HELPING runaway slaves. How do you think you would have felt about this if you had been living at that time?

4. Harriet's first name at birth was actually Araminta, but she changed her first name to Harriet to honor her mother. If you could change your first name to be the same as someone you love very much, what would your new name be? Why would you choose that particular name?
